Chapter 1 by Kawaii_Potato

Write a question for the next person to answer:

What if you became a superhero, but no one could ever know who you are

Chapter 2 by Totally Olive

I would save the world as the nameless hero I am and hide away while people tried to find me.

What if you woke up and had a family of your own

Chapter 3 by Evan Caito

I would try to raise them well.

What if you could be super strong but you had to lose your friends and get tortured.

Chapter 4 by Coraline Castell

I don't think I could do that, let those I care so deeply go through so much pain. Nothing is worth that much.

What if you had the chance to save the entire world of all of it's problems forever, but absolutely no one would remember you or that you did it?

Chapter 6 by .l.a.

I would save the world if I could. It only matters if I remember that I did it, because after I died, I would not remember anything anyway.

What if you had the chance to live forever?

Chapter 7 by 20hupj

I would have to watch those around me die. My parents, my brother, my children. They would all die before me. I would watch new discoveries, but I would also see the world fall apart. I would be there when the world finally dies and everyone on it apart from me vanishes. I wouldn't want that. I would rather live life to the fullest and be with my family rather then be all alone.

What if you could restart your life from whatever point you wish, but anything after that point would be forgotten. Would you do it?

Chapter 8 by Bailey Hever

A second chance. There are second chances in the world, without rewriting time. Truly, I tell you, that there is always another try. But how can you prevent what has already come? If you forget everything after the point in which you choose life, how is that any different from the first time you experienced it? If you chose to go back to change something, you will most likely repeat the same course, because you won't know the future. But if you go back to relive something, then that something isn't special to you. For if it was, you would remember it so vividly and so emotionally that you wouldn't need to go, and waste moments of your life, you wouldn't need a do over for something you can't change. I would never accept such an
